Lost Splendor: The Amazing Memoirs of the Man Who Killed Rasputin Prince Felix Youssouppoff
From the rear cover of this 314 page book: "Born to great riches, master of vast feudal estates and many palaces, Felix Youssouppoff led the life of a grand lord in the days before the Russian Revolution. Married to a niece of Czar Nicholas II, he could observe at close range the rampant corruption and intrigues of the imperial court, which culminated in the rise to power of the sinister monk Rasputin. Finally, impelled by patriotism and his love for the Romanoff dynasty, which he felt was in danger of destroying itself and Russia, he killed Rasputin in 1916 with the help of the Grand Duke Dimitri and others. More than any other single event, the assassination of Rasputin helped to bring about the cataclysmic upheaval that ended in the advent of the Soviet regime. In 1919, the Youssouppoffs left Russia. They sold two Rembrandt paintings (now in the National Gallery in Washington), as well as Princess Irina's jewelry. Contesting their portrayal in an MGM film and a CBS television drama, both dealing with Rasputin, they subsequently won large libel settlements in 1934 and 1965. Prince Youssouppoff, speaking about his wife to a magazine reporter, said 'Isn't she beautiful? We live as happily together as we did the first day.....This is love, true love - something I've felt for no one but her'."
