This book is based on the true story of how one American Christian woman found herself married to a Libyan Muslim man and her desperate struggle to free her two young sons and herself from the clutches of Libyan strongman Muammar Gaddafi's government in 1979. This story tells how she nearly died trying to bear her son in Libya and her struggle to stay alive while desperately trying to free her two young children and herself from a country ruled by a religion whose regard for human life is substandard at best. This is a story of how this young mother's journey took her through the hopelessness of being held hostage in this African nation of the Sahara desert and her struggle for freedom. If you know anyone who is considering marrying a Muslim then you will definitely want them to read this book as it tells what their life could be like married to a Muslim from the Middle East. If after reading this story they still decide to marry their Muslim friend you will at least know they have been given a full accounting of what may lie ahead of them and any children they may bear together.
